

Headache

Is often a warning that the liver is torpid or inactive. More serious troubles may follow. For a prompt, efficient cure of Headache and all liver troubles, take

Hood's Pills

While they tone the liver, restore full, regular action of the bowels, they do not grip or pain, do not irritate or inflame the internal organs, but have a positive tonic effect. Use, at all drugstores or by mail of C. L. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

The Great Presidential Campaign of 1900

The policies of the great political parties are now being formed and the candidates discussed. The voice of the people as recorded by ballot at the approaching Presidential election will probably decide the policy of the nation for the next decade. Every citizen must study the great questions that are to come before the people. This can only be done through the medium of a great newspaper. Now is the time, therefore, for every voter to subscribe for the best and most reliable newspaper obtainable. The Semi-Weekly Republic covers the whole field of political news. While it is Democratic, it publishes the news in regard to all political parties without prejudice. Its telegraphic and cable news service is superior to that of any other paper. Its special features are the best. In fact, it is the paper for that large class of readers who cannot afford, or do not have access to the daily papers.

Attention is also called to The Republic's Sunday Magazine. Its half-tone illustrations are alone worth the subscription price. It is made up of special articles by the best literary talent, embracing a variety of subjects of current interest. News features of absorbing interest are illustrated and enlarged upon. For the benefit of ladies, the latest fashions are handsomely illustrated. The Republic Sunday Magazine is always interesting to every member of the family.

The subscription price of the Semi-Weekly Republic is $1.00 per year. The Republic Sunday Magazine $1.25 per year. Both papers are now being offered at the very low price of $1.50 for one year. To secure this low rate both must be ordered and paid for at the same time.

Manual Training for a President's Son

Toledo was one of the first cities to establish a free manual training school as an integral part of the high school, and it has developed its original idea until the fundamental principles of manual training are taught in every grade from the primary school to the class of graduates. All of this instruction is free and its scope and thoroughness astound every visitor to the school.

The fund which formed the nucleus for this unique school was left to the city of Toledo many years ago by Joseph Scott. Mr. Scott believed that too little was known of the real dignity of labor. He saw the manual workers and the brain worker drifting further and farther apart, utterly unconscious of their many points of common interest. He held that a boy who sees nothing in manual labor but dull drudgery will despise both the labor and the laborer. With the au-quisition of skill in himself comes the readiness to recognize it and to appreciate it when found in others. President Hayes recognized the broad educational value of the training and sent his youngest son to the Toledo school where he graduated.—From "An Interesting Experiment," in Democrat's Magazine for October.

EAGLES IN THE CHAIR.

They Closely Choose Live Wires to Fill and Coo Upon.

Two gigantic eagles by a strange accident were electrocuted on the thick copper wire by which the electric power is transmitted for 35 miles into Fresno from its mountain source. They were burned to a cinder. These wires are strung from the three vertices of a frame shaped like an equilateral triangle and are 22 inches apart. The top wires, says the San Francisco Examiner, are on the same level, and the great birds found themselves quite close together when they alighted. It is evident, however, that an attempt was made at closer companionship. Probably the lordly mate leaned over to whisper some "sweet nothing" into his mate's willing ear. Be that as it may, their heads came close enough together to establish what electricians call a "short circuit," and 11,000 volts of electricity flashed from the body of one eagle to the other. They fell forward across the wires dead. The intense heat generated by the passage of the powerful current from one wire to the other melted the copper like so much wax, although the wires are thicker than an ordinary lead pencil. Both wires fell to the ground, the great birds clutching their sight but fatal perch in the grip of death. The contact with the ground again established a circuit, and though it could not have lasted more than half a minute both birds were almost completely incinerated. Only the charred skulls and the big talons, with a heap of ashes, a bit of the wishbone and one or two feathers remained to show the cause of the trouble to the pathologists who appeared a couple of hours later to repair the damage. It is known that the birds were exposed to the electric current for only a fraction of a minute, because immediately upon the breaking of the wires, automatic alarms were sounded at the power houses at both ends, and as quickly as possible the current was switched to a set of reserve wires, leaving the broken wires free. The men gathered the portable remains of the eagles, cutting the wires so as to leave them in the grip of the talons, from which the muscles had been burned and shriveled the ends of the half-consumed leg bones.
